

Margot Mesnard is the Program Manager for the Sint Maarten EPIC Foundation, providing organizational oversight as well as field support for EPIC's various conservation and education projects.

Previously, she served as the Project Coordinator for an EPIC pelican monitoring and conservation project. With a background in international cooperation, she has specialized in project management around ecosystem restoration and climate change related projects, with 15 year's experience working in the Caribbean and Small Island States.

A nature and outdoors enthusiast, Margot believes that we should all keep learning and play our part individually and collectively in protecting our environment.
